

ABSTRACT

A sensor is used to detect luminescent radiation that is radiated from a reflector as a result of state changes induced by a beam of radiation being incident on an area of the reflector. The intensity of the luminescent radiation at particular wavelengths can be used to determine the intensity of the beam of radiation.